Reader and critic clash on 'Clash'

"The Clash delivers a rock masterpiece" (Feb. 21) was the modest title of Juan Rodriguez's analysis of "one of the greatest albums to ever grace the history of rock 'n' roll," the first great double album since Dylan's Blonde on Blonde and Clapton's Layla. Rodriguez, whom I have not read before, is sparing no superlatives on London Calling by the British band, The Clash. Among the many gullible who doubtless rushed out to buy this gem, I regretfully admit to being one. What did I find?

Briefly, I found one of those well-intentioned but noisy and so adolescent discs that is killing rock. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder, of course, and I could forgive slightly less enthusiastic praise if there were much to commend in the album. Unfortunately, there is very little indeed. The music is boring, bandwagon and badly played. The production is garage quality and the vocals are worse.

What does the group have to say? "The group offers the most trenchant political and social comment in rock today . . . like Marx, Trotsky, Buddy Holly and the Beatles in one gulp."

Rodriguez evidently has no understanding of either Marx or Trotsky and certainly no understanding of what makes the Beatles and Holly great. The "poetry" on this album a freshman stuff, and should never be confused with Dylan or the Beatles, let alone Karl Marx.

Worse albums have been made, of course, but this one is still destined for oblivion; it won't merit even a footnote in "the history of rock 'n' roll."

Bailey misses important element

I write in connection with the review in today's Gazette (March 8) of the performance of Eubie! at Place des Arts. I attended the third and final show last night.

Firstly let me say that Bruce Bailey wrote a valid critique, but I suggest that he missed an important element of the production's merit thereby invalidating some of his unfavorable comments.

I grew up in London, Eng., during what was perhaps the heyday of black revues . . . when I was able to see things like Blackbirds and The Cotton Club Revue.

Bailey judges the Eubie! production from a contemporary viewpoint and is entitled to do so as a matter perhaps of personal taste. However, he seems not to appreciate the fact that the show was truly first class as a piece of nostalgia. Bailey is correct when he said that the show contains a great deal of Uncle Tom elements but the original show was even more guilty of this — the comedians in most cases were adult "Black Sambos," with scripts and diction that, by comparison, made Rochester sound like an Ivy League graduate.

The shows were full of wagon wheel Carolina moon, magnolia and shanty settings filled with tremendously talented and vivacious singers and dancers, the men dressed in patched jeans and the women wearing bandanas in their hair! All this would have been considered tasteless by today's standards but that is how it was and this is the era which was recreated most vividly in Eubie!

What we were given was a first class impression of the 1930s Harlem shows atmosphere. The dancers both featured and supporting gave authentic presentations of what the great originators did on stage — such acts as Ananjias Berry and the Berry brothers the Nicholas Brothers, Bill Bailey, Jig Saw and so on.

Last night's performance was relaxed and happy and conjured up most fond memories.

I wish Bailey could have sat back, let his feet tap and enjoyed himself.

Critic bombs on 'Pearl' review

Who taught Mike Boone how to write a review? Juan Rodriguez, I suspect.

Boone's "review" of Pearl Harbor & The Explosions displayed the notion that a critic's raison d'etre is to criticize. This critique resembled a piece that could have been written without attending the show.

I felt the show did manage "to get into high gear" and that the band was much more talented than a "high school dance band." To compare Pearl Gates' dancing abilities to the soul acts at Rockhead's is like comparing Boone's writing talents to those of Bernstein and Woodward. The major difference lies in the fact that Pearl E Gates has potential.

Pearl Harbor & The Explosions may not be the act that will change the face of rock 'n' roll, but their sound is both listenable and enjoyable. It's meant to be good time music, and on that account Pearl Harbor & the Explosions succeeded quite well at the Pretzel.

When will Boone and his "paper-mate," Rodriguez, learn that when everything is said and done, it's still only rock 'n' roll.

WEEKEND GUIDE

BEST BETS

DANCE

Danseparteur, Quebec City's only professional dance company and one of two modern dance groups in the province, makes its annual appearance in Montreal tomorrow with matinee and evening performances at the studios of the Eddy Toussaint Dance Company. Two different programs will be danced but both include a work by Fernand Nault of Les Grands Ballets Canadiens as well as diverse dances by company founder Chantal Belhumeur.

Marie Chouinard, who creates controversial dances, and Odette Oliver share a performance tomorrow in the second of three choreographic afternoons devoted to Quebec independent dancers sponsored by the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts at 57 Prince Arthur East.

THEATRE

Cheryl Cashman's tour-de-force Turning Thirty is back at the Centaur until March 30. It's a delightful and disarming solo show in which the talented young Canadian actress assumes a half-dozen identities while examing our foibles and follies. Turning Thirty has sex, religion and, yes, even some politics.

Also at Centaur, David French's comedy about opening night nerves, Jitters. It's not the brightest production, but it boasts one sterling performance (by Eric House) and a highly-amusing script.

Meanwhile, the Saidye Bronfman Centre has a soft-centred nostalgia trip in the form of a musical called Blue Champagne. If you liked the music of the 40s, you'll love this show.

In French, if you like high-voltage drama, there's a superbly staged production (by Danielle J. Suissa) of Jean-Paul Sartre's Huis Clos at Cafe de la Place.

There are also two excellent comedies playing, both with a serious backbone: Appelez-moi Stephane at Theatre des Voyagements, and Victor ou les enfants au pouvoir at Theatre du Nouveau Monde.

POPULAR MUSIC

A busy weekend is in store for those who like their music varied, international, and away from the norm.

Tonight at Theatre St. Denis, there's the local debut of the Boomtown Rats, one of the brainiest new-wave groups, according to critics and many others on this side of the pond who made the strange and dark ditte I Don't Like Mondays a hit and the quintet's current album, The Fine Art of Surfacing, bubble on the charts.

France's most popular new-wave group, Telephone, debuts at Le Pretzel club, tonight through Sunday. If any French group can make a dent in America, this is it. And for a peek at contemporary pop music as handled behind the Iron Curtain, there's the local debut (tomorrow night at the St. Denis) by Czech star Helena Vondrakova, who has won numerous international song festival awards.

Finally, one of the liveliest Chicago rhythm 'n' blues bands around, led by harmonica-singer Junior Wells and guitarist Buddy Guy, completes a stint at the Rising Sun this weekend.

MUSIC

The S.E.M. Ensemble, a group of five musicians founded 10 years ago by the Czech-born flautist, Petr Kotik, will perform the three works which painter Marcel Duchamp composed in 1913 when he became interested in music, in the auditorium of the Museum of Fine Arts, tonight at 8:30 p.m. There's a rarity for you.

Also tonight, in the Salle Claude Champagne, Jean-Francois Senart, will lead his chamber choir, l'Ensemble Vocal de Radio Canada, in a public recording session in which works by Delius, Mozart, Kodaly, Hindemith, Gounod, Willan, Peters, Charpentier, Somers, Dela, and Freedman will be sung.

Saturday evening at 8 p.m., seven members of the Musica Camerata group will be heard in a free concert in The Citadel, Drummond street north of Maisonneuve, in which the featured work will be Mozart's great D major Divertimento in D major, K. 334. The program will also include works by Haydn and Khatchaturian. That same evening, in the same hall at 8:30 p.m., a trio made up of Dorothy Fraiberg, pianist, Robert Crowley, clarinetist, and Katherine Skorzewska, cellist, will offer a free concert of works by Bruch, Glinka, Beethoven and Brahms.

FILMS

The film opening of note this weekend is Les Desmoiselles de Wilko, at Le Parisien, a Polish-French production which has received an Oscar nomination for best foreign film. It's a slow-moving and cerebral experience, as a vacationing invalid returns to the site of his youth, where he encounters five sisters — each of whom, once loved him. Dubbed in French, and without subtitles; it will appeal only to the more series fans of cinema.

For escapists, that grand classic Gone with the Wind returns to the screen at the Imperial, with Vivien Leigh as the self-centered Scarlet O'Hara and Clark Gable as dashing Rhett Butler. If you've only seen it on television, take this chance to see the U.S. civil war on the big screen.

As Oscar time approaches, the best bets for many Montrealers are still the five films nominated as the year's best picture — all of which are still playing in town: All That Jazz at cinemas Cote des Neiges and Place du Canada; Kramer vs. Kramer at the Boulevard and Decarie Square; Breaking Away at the Dorval and Kent cinemas; Apocalypse Now at the York; and Norma Rae at La Cite.
